In-Flight Crew Connections Brings Greater Transparency and Strategic Workforce Solutions to NBAA BACE

The company expands its role beyond staffing, introducing tools, partnerships, and resources designed to strengthen flight departments for the long term while preserving its hallmark human touch.

Charlotte, NC — October 10, 2025

As business aviation continues to evolve amid changing workforce dynamics and global uncertainty, In-Flight Crew Connections (IFCC) is heading to the 2025 NBAA Business Aviation Convention & Exhibition (BACE) with a clear message: redefining what it means to be a staffing partner.

Long recognized as a trusted provider of contract staffing, direct hire recruiting, and payroll/HR services, IFCC is expanding its reach by introducing new tools, educational content, and training partnerships that empower flight departments to operate smarter and faster.

"We're not here just to fill open positions," said Jennifer Guthrie, CEO of In-Flight Crew Connections. "We're here to help flight departments thrive by connecting them with the right talent, the right resources, and the right insights to plan for the future. Our goal is to be a true strategic partner, not just a staffing provider."

Yet even as it modernizes, IFCC remains grounded in the personal relationships and high-touch service that have made it a cornerstone of the business aviation community for more than two decades.

"Technology and innovation are essential, but the human connection still matters most," Guthrie added.

Among IFCC's recent initiatives is its new Pilot Locator, a web-based tool that allows operators to instantly visualize available pilots by aircraft type and location. Designed to bring transparency and efficiency to the staffing process, the feature helps operators better understand pilot availability and make data-informed decisions.

In addition, IFCC launched regular industry blogs and whitepapers aimed at helping aviation leaders navigate workforce trends, regulatory changes, and operational best practices. This thought leadership content offers flight departments a steady stream of insights to support better planning and management in a fast-changing world.

Further enhancing client value, IFCC has expanded its training partnership network, introducing client-facing training partners that complement its long-standing crew-facing programs. These alignments give operators access to world-class training, creating benefits for both sides of the staffing equation.

The company is also exploring creative solutions to address the growing maintenance-technician shortage.

"When our clients and crew succeed, the entire industry moves forward," said Guthrie. "Even as the economic and political landscape grows more complex, our goal is to help both sides navigate it with confidence."

At this year's NBAA BACE, IFCC's team will be on-site to meet with clients, partners, crew, and other aviation professionals to discuss how the company's evolving service model is helping flight departments adapt to the future of business aviation. Visit IFCC at NBAA BACE (Booth #3312) to explore how the company is helping shape a more resilient, efficient, and connected aviation workforce.
